The Society for the Teaching of Psychology recognizes Dr. Barbara Nodine for her many contributions to the teaching of psychology and to the development of the undergraduate psychology curriculum. Dr. Nodine is Chair and Professor of Psychology at Arcadia University (formerly Beaver College), where she has served for over three decades. Dr. Nodine has made significant contributions to early national discussions of Writing Across the Curriculum and has written numerous books and articles discussing how psychology teachers can use writing to improve student learning. She served on the St. Mary’s Conference Steering Committee, a committee which focused on improving the quality of undergraduate education in psychology and set the stage for the development of the Undergraduate Psychology Major Learning Goals and Outcomes, which were recently approved by the American Psychological Association. Dr. Nodine served in several offices of APA Division 2 (now known as the Society for the Teaching of Psychology) including a term as President of Division 2 in 1980-1981. In 1996, she was recipient of the Society’s Robert S. Daniel Award for College/University Teaching, and in 1999 she received the American Psychological Foundation Award for Distinguished Teaching of Psychology.
